Fair Opens Wed.

The Monterey County Fair and National Horse Show will open Wednesday in Monterey for a five-day run.

This year's International Fair will feature an international village with exhibits and entertainment from foreign countries. The 8:00 o'clock opening breakfast Wednesday will honor the foreign born residents of the county.

One hundred and three Carmel residents have entered art works in the Art Division of the Fair. Familiar artists from last year's fair who will again display their works include Howell Armor, Jean Fowler, Jessie James, Greta Popoff, and Howard Roberts.

Many beautiful orchids will be seen in the Floriculture Display which includes divisions of cut flowers, dry and fresh arrangements, orchids, collections of ferns, potted plants and gardens. Greenthumbers from Carmel include Mrs. D. Burns, Lewis Blown, Mrs. John Doud, Mrs. L. Gottfried, Maurice Hanssens, Osborne Handley, John Humphreys, Mrs. Eugene Link, Gwenn McEwen, Mrs. Edith Moore, Mrs. Douglas Martz, Eric Mayell, Dee Olivetti, Mike Olivetti, Edward O'Neill, and Hallie Samson. Gardeners entering exhibits in the floriculture show will share over $6,000 in premium money.

The Agriculture Department features the most outstanding produce in Monterey County, the world's largest vegetable producing county. From Carmel Valley the Carmelo 4-H Club will feature an exhibit booth in the Agriculture Department.

Visitors to this year's Fair will be greeted by constant entertainment on two stages, colorful clowns cavorting about the mid-

Tom And John Go Hunting—In Carmel Bay With A Rifle

Shark hunting in Carmel Bay is the sport developed in the past two weeks by Tom Bunn Jr. of Pebble Beach and John Dalley, 13, of Belmont, who is spending the summer here with his grandmother, Mrs. Lloyd Simpson.

The boys go out in John's 17 foot boat powered by an outboard motor. "I run the boat, Tom shoots with a 32 rifle," says John. "Last week we saw 11 or 12 sharks. This week we have only seen two. We are waiting for the sun to bring them out again."

John reports that the sharks they hunted were harmless blue or basking sharks. "But I wouldn't want to be swimming around in that water, though," he adds.

He has also tried to catch sharks with hooks this week. "One bit but I missed him," John laments.

Abstractism Not Art Says Chinese Painter, It Doesn't Communicate

By Bob Kaller

One of the brightest stars to appear on the horizon of Carmel's painting world in recent years is an ex-Army Colonel from China named S. C. Yuan (the S. C. stands for Si-Chen.)

A dedicated worker in his field who employs both Impressionist and distortion techniques, Yuan is nevertheless rare in being a frank opponent of abstractism. The latter, he regards as a fine means of self expression . . . but not Art by anyone's stretch of the imagination. When communication begins, then Art is born he contends.

Born in Hanchow, some 150 miles from Shanghai, Yuan's father was a prominent government and military official, from a well-known family.

Yuan from the beginning was destined for one of the traditional careers, but was always interested in painting. He started to paint as early as 1930 while still in high school, and from that time onward the world of line and color and form held him tightly in its grip. Mr. Yuan contends, incidentally, that artists are essentially born, rather than made—and that if one has a serious inclination towards art or painting, literally nothing will stand in its way in the long run.

Yuan himself, after a prolonged period of conflict with his family over his choice of a career, (while the fine artist in China has much prestige and standing, he is regarded as rather unlikely to make much money), was permitted to continue his studies at the Central University of Nanking. Here, besides a broad academic training, he studied under Peon Ju, who was one of the great Chinese painters of this century. Ju, a leading light in the Paris art world for over a quarter of a century, had been exhibiting all over

Willox Pushes For Action On Local Sign Ordinance

Planning Commission Chairman George Willox, yesterday afternoon, with chalk and blackboard, illustrated the on premise sign problems in the business district. "How do you compute sixteen square feet?" he asked other commissioners, in study session. "The present sign ordinance is too loose," he added in an effort to spur action on framing a new sign ordinance for Carmel.

Mr. Willox' illustrations were examples of large signboards with small letter area, two signboards of legal size on one building with two occupancies, letters larger than the board, and signs with posts and decorations added to the board.

"Which is the sign, the letters or the board?" he queried, "and should the posts and decorations be counted in the 16 square feet allowed for a sign?"

Commissioner Florence Josselyn replied that the existing sign ordinance had "held the line well." She said that she, Commissioners Fred Keeble and Herbert Blanks, a special committee appointed on July 22 to work on a new sign ordinance, planned to meet with City Attorney John Morse before next week's regular planning commission meeting and at that time hoped to have a progress report ready. She added that they also hoped to have some answer to the exterior floodlighting problems which have arisen in the city.

Chairman Willox appeared anxious for some action on both matters. The new sign ordinance has been hanging fire since 1955, when the interim ordinance came into effect. On March 26, 1958, Building Inspector Floyd Adams, at his request, was asked to work with the city attorney and bring to the

Any pre-meeting concern on the part of the County Board of Supervisors that they would be wasting their time in holding two budget sessions away from Salinas, in addition to the required one in the county seat, was dispelled Monday in Monterey and Tuesday in King City.

In Monterey the meeting was well attended, the taxpayers vocal. For over two hours they protested cutting from the budget the $24,000 which provides for a county psychiatrist.

At the King City hearing, Editor Harry Casey, Rustler-Herald, objected to the $15,000 budget allowance for support of Monterey County Industrial Development, Inc. His end of the county doesn't get anything out of this, he pointed out. Another citizen said that factories gobble up water needed for agriculture; one had already lowered the water level in the Salinas Valley so that more pumping was needed to irrigate the crops.

Nobody got around to mention that factories produce smoke and smog, detrimental to leaf crops and the tourist trade.

Every year the Carmel City Council refuses the Monterey County Industrial Development Inc.'s annual request to the cities for donations, yet Carmel citizens, through county taxes, have to share the cost of maintaining a committee engaged in an undesirable activity.

Like mice in a maze, everybody wants to go in and out the same door at the post office. They go in the in door, and out the in door, instead of going out the out door which is right next door.

Incoming and outgoing traffic meet. There follows withdrawing, or shoulder scrunching, depending on the basic personality plus the early childhood training of the individuals involved.

Postmaster Fred Strong has had some very prettily lettered signs made which designate which is the in door and which the out, but he's been saving them to put up on the new doors that are part of the large scale remodeling and expansion plans for the post office building if the owners get their lease renewed. He was distressed to learn this week that the new doors will be aluminum and glass, not suitable for affixing signs to. Attorney Tom Perry told Mr. Strong to put up the fancy new signs on the old doors, and when the new doors come along, if suitable lettering cannot be worked

Nancy Wooliever, Lead In Pharaoh, Follows The Family Tradition Of Participation In Forest Theater

By Herbert Heron

Our publicity writer has been called away, so this is to fill the gap. It would not be proper to boost my own play, and certainly I don't want to condemn it, for that would not help the advance sale of tickets, so perhaps some slants on various phases of the Forest Theater work might be in order.

First, let me say that I am thrilled by the enthusiasm and the competence of the production staff. Dave Kirk, the director, is a whiz. Much of the day and half the night he works at white heat on Pharaoh. Knowing theater from all angles, he advises on settings, lighting, costumes, without slighting his prime job of running rehearsals. He even strips to the waist in the warm sun beating down on the great open-air stage and applies the rich turquoise blue to the temple of Amen-Ra, while his corps of agile assistants follow his instructions for other parts of the work. Chuck Stohr, the builder, having finished his work on the flats which are the palace walls of Thebes and the streets of Hatahirab, is now making the lotus-topped pillars for the temple of the gods.

Ruth Allen has contributed generously of her time and skill in the painting; and the several

Ball Goes Bang! Theatre Crumples In Dust Cloud

The Carmel Theatre is becoming a heap of rubble. It is being demolished to clear the Ocean Avenue and Mission Street site for a store and bank development planned by Leslie C. Fenton.

A huge crane is knocking down the walls of the former theater by swinging against the structure a pear-shaped concrete block at the end of a cable. The block hits the crumbling walls with a loud thud. Masonry falls to the ground in dusty clouds while spectators marvel at the efficiency of the modern battering ram.

* League game.

The 1959 Carmel High football squad starts firing on September 15 in the annual Red and Gray game and winds up the season on November 13 against arch-rival Pacific Grove. The varsity squad faces a seven-game schedule, the junior-varsity has eight tilts, and the lightweights play four. Carmel's varsity was originally slated for an eight-game slate, but the Live Oak Acorns cancelled their games with Carmel, Hollister, and Gilroy to play an easier schedule with junior-varsity teams. Carmel's junior-varsity picks up the Live Oak squad on October 16 with the Carmel lightweights meeting the Live Oak junior-varsity on the same day. Only new opponent on this year's schedule is the Andrew Hill High School of San Jose. This is a comparatively new school in the San Jose area and has an enrollment of nearly 1,000.

Carmel will be the host school for the Coast Counties Athletic League Jamboree which will be held at the Fort Ord Stadium on September 18. This is the first time the Jamboree has moved away from the Salinas High Stadium since its inception in 1947. Fort Ord has a seating capacity greater than the Salinas Stadium and has one of the finest lighting systems on the west coast.

KING CITY WINS DISTRICT NINE LITTLE LEAGUE TITLE

Playing before a capacity crowd at the Carmel Little League Park last Saturday afternoon, the King City representative edged the Gilroy squad, 3 to 2, in a well-played game which gave the King City lads the Little League championship for District Nine. King City, a slight underdog in the finals, worked its way to the title by clipping Soledad in the Area One playoff, winning from Salinas in the semi-finals at Carmel, and upsetting unbeaten Gilroy in Saturday's finals.

Carmel's San Carlos Agency squad ran into a player shortage in the consolation playoff against Salinas last Saturday and was drubbed, 10 to 6, by the hard-trying Salinas aggregation.

Following Saturday's final game, the Little League officials, players, fans, and umpires gathered at the Carmel Legion Hall for a victory dinner prepared by Carmel Little League boosters. Over 200 enthusiastic supporters of Little League baseball turned out for the dinner and helped the King City aggregation celebrate a well-earned victory.

NICK VERTIN CARMEL YOUTH CENTER HORSESHOE CHAMP

Pitching with deadly accuracy and having a fair modicum of luck to go along with each cast, Nick Vertin won the coveted Youth Center Horseshoe championship by downing Phil White, 25-7 and 25-12, in Tuesday night's finals action. Vertin pitched too many ringers for the hard-trying White and outsnookered him on the frequent close-ones which came up for debate. On his way to the title, Nick disposed of Mike O'Shea and George Crispo before giving the same treatment to White. This is the second title in a row for Vertin and allows him to retain possession of the trophy which he garnered last year.

Softball action at the popular play spot is coming down to the wire with just two games left on the docket. Friday night's game at Monterey's Jacks Park matches the B-squad against the Junior Optimists and on Monday night at Jacks Park, the A-squad winds up the season against the Monterey Smoke Shop nine. The B-squad is still in the running for the Socko League title and a win for them on Friday night coupled with a loss by the Monterey DeMolay will put them on top.

MEDICAL EXAMS FOR CARMEL HIGH GRIDDERS AUG. 27 AND 28

Candidates for positions on the Carmel High School varsity, junior-varsity, and lightweight football squads are asked to report to the high school gymnasium between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon on August 27 or 28 for their medical examination which qualifies them for football practice. The physical examinations are held in the office of the boys physical education department and will be conducted under the supervision of Dr. Mills.

Uniforms for all football candidates will be issued on Saturday, August 29 and regular practice sessions get underway Monday, August 31. Until school starts on September 10, practice hours for all squads will be from 1:00 to 3:00 p.m.

CARMEL WINS TRI-COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP

Coach Don Smith led his undefeated swim team to its 42nd straight victory and its third straight tri-county swimming championship last Saturday in Salinas.

The final standings were Carmel 255½, Watsonville 177, Salinas 167½, Gilroy 154½, Monterey 146, Pacific Grove 103½ and Santa Cruz 50.

In the trials which were held three days before the meet, Carmel captured more places in the finals than any other team. If they had taken the trials and made a final out of them, Carmel would have had to settle for a second or third place. From this it was seen that the Carmel swimmers over all performed better in the finals.

The team was sparked by the brilliant performances of triple winners Ann Giles and Steve Rogers. Ann and Steve both won the butterfly and the individual medley events as well as being on the winning relay teams in the 15-16 age groups. The only other triple winners were from Salinas in the 8 and under age group. Carmel dominated the 15-16 age group, but in the younger age groups, Gilroy, Salinas and Watsonville were the victors which serves notice that the future isn't too bright for the victory happy Carmel swimmers.

Probably the race of the day was the very last one where the heavily favored Watsonville 15-16 boys relay was edged out by the record breaking Carmel team of Mike Collyer, Doyle Clayton, Mike Cook and Steve Rogers.

Only one club record fell as Cathy Dancy set a new standard in the girls 100 yard freestyle. This was due to the fact that the 100 yard freestyle was the only event that was swum the regulation distance. This was due to the longer length of the Salinas pool. This was discouraging for in their last dual meet with Salinas, Carmel broke seven club records.

Turning in the upset of the day was John Aitken who won the 11-12 breaststroke after qualifying sixth in the trials. Also turning in surprising wins were John Hackbarth in the 13-14 breaststroke, Pat Garvey in the 13-14 butterfly and Janice Meyenberg in girls diving. Coach Smith was pleased with the results for practically every swimmer turned in their best performances.

The big guns for Carmel were triple winners Rogers and Giles; Mike Cook with two firsts and a second; Janice Meyenberg with two firsts; Tina Miller with a first, a second and a third; John Hackbarth with a first, a third and a sixth; Barbara Giles with two firsts and a third; Mary Pat Palmer with a first and two seconds; Pat Garvey with a first and second; Sandy Aebersold with a first and two seconds; John Aitken with a first, a fifth and a sixth; Cathy Dancy with a first, a second and a third; Leslie Strosnider with a first, a second and a fifth; and Doyle Clayton with a first and two fifths.

Other swimmers gathering points were Gary Aebersold with a fourth and fifth; Vicky Holman with a third; Kerry Mahoney with two thirds; Mike McGibney with a second and fifth; Mike Glover with a fourth and a fifth; Pam Petersen with a second and a third; Susie Petersen with a fourth, Bob Wells with a fourth and sixth; Susan Shirley with a fourth and a fifth; Jane Martin with a third and a fourth; Toni Cox with a fifth and sixth; Roberta Thaler with a fourth, a fifth and a sixth; Ronny Berry with a fourth and a sixth; Ray Nobles with a third and a fourth; Bill Coleman with a sixth; Barbara Von Richter with

Doris Birkland Exhibits Weaving, Ceramics At Library

Doris Birkland of Carmel, artist craftsman and director of crafts at the Army Language School, is exhibiting selected pieces of her work in the Carmel Crafts Guild case in the Harrison Memorial Library during August.

Following graduation from Louisana State University in Fine Arts and California College of Arts and Crafts, Miss Birkland traveled and studied in Munich and in Berlin and at Mills College and Stanford. When visiting the studios of European craftsmen, she took pictures of their work and later at Amerika Haus in Berlin had an exhibit called Fifty Photos of Europe, some of which are now on exhibit in the library. Following her photographic interests, Miss Birkland has won many firsts in photography and is a member of the Padre Trails Camera Club. Some of her ceramics are now on exhibit at the Smithsonian Institute.

As a new outlet for her many creative talents, Miss Birkland's latest venture is the "Doris Birkland Art Studio," which just opened on Dolores Street. Here one may see her weaving, ceramics, cloisonne, her silver, gold, and enamel jewelry, her silk screen prints and paintings and her mosaic tables. All the furniture in the studio is hand crafted. Alongside her own work, Miss Birkland has chosen objects by her fellow California craftsmen, and she plans many one-man exhibits and art programs.

Doris Birkland is an active member of the Carmel Crafts Guild, serving on the board and participating in their Monterey Fair exhibits as a worker as well as a prize winning exhibitor.

Experimental weaving and salt and celadon glaze ceramics are in the library display.

Willox Pushes Sign Ordinance

planning commission recommendations and suggestions for the new sign ordinance. On July 22 the sign ordinance was removed from the hands of the building inspector and city attorney and given to the special committee.

Floodlighting problems were first discussed by commissioners April 22, triggered by the appearance of new exterior motel floodlights. Again the building inspector and city attorney were asked to work out a solution to bring to the commission. On July 22 this problem, too, was taken out of their hands and given to the same special committee as the signs.

Mr. Willox with his illustrations was endeavoring, it appeared, to show commissioners what problems existed and get some immediate action.

He was also concerned with landscaping and stated that a misunderstanding existed to the effect that landscaping under overhanging balconies did not count. This was a detriment to business district architectural development he felt.

All commissioners were concerned about the request of the Arts Commission that two informational-directional signs for the Forest Theater be hung at the intersection of Ocean Avenue and Junipero and Mountain View Streets. The planning commission was asked by the arts commission to initiate procedure for the hanging of the two carved wooden signs, their recommendations to be sent to the council for action.

Commissioner Josselyn worried that if the city-owned Forest Theater had signs, could similar signs be asked for Sunset School Auditorium, also publicly owned.

"What about churches?" interpolated Chairman Willox. He also said that it was not a matter of public ownership of property that should be deciden but "who is deriving benefit from use of the property."

Mrs. Josselyn concurred and stated that it was private enterprise which used both publicly-owned properties.

Commissioners Jessie McGregor and Hugh Smith appeared to favor the proposed signs. "They're seasonal," said Mrs. McGregor.

Planning commissioners will decide about the signs next week in regular session, after the Arts Commission submits drawings requested by Mr. Wilcox

Also to be considered officially at that time are building site changes requested by Dr. C. Arthur Spaulding at Carmelo and Fourth and by James Phillips at Casanova and Twelfth; altered plans for Carmel Lodge; an addition to existing apartments; an interior partition request. The Youth Center will ask the commission at next week's meeting to extend construction time for an auditorium addition in a letter requested by Mr. Willox. The commission will consider General Plan amendment rezoning at the mouth of the Valley and receive a report on a meeting of commissioners with Lieutenant Colonel C. A. De Camp on his plan for commercial district building controls.

During yesterday's study session, Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher, chairman of the Citizens Committee, told commissioners he had analyzed the proposed central district zoning and would like to discuss his analysis with commissioners after having it authorized by the Citizens Committee executive board for presentation to the city council. Chairman Willox asked for a written report on the analysis and assured Admiral Fisher it would have commission consideration.

Definition of landscaping area specification for business zone sites will also receive the commission's attention next week.

The public improvements committee of the commission has been studying a ratio of tillable ground to open space demanded for off-street parking, driveways and walkways and loading zones, for business district sites.

Judge Frees Gall, Finds Insufficient Evidence Of Arson

A complaint charging Joseph Gall with setting fire to his home on Casanova Street on August 4 was dismissed on August 14 by Township Justice Harold White of Castroville, presiding at a preliminary hearing in Monterey Municipal Court.

Gall, who had been held in the county jail under $2,000 bail, was ordered freed immediately.

Judge White said there was not sufficient evidence to connect Gall with the fire which gutted his five-room home. Deputy District Attorney William C. Marsh said that whether a new complaint would be filed depends on discussion with police and fire authorities.

Witnesses called by Marsh at the preliminary hearing included Donald Wier, investigator for the National Board of Fire Underwriters, Dagmar Raphael, employee of the Carmel Investment Company, Gall's fire insurance handlers; Charles Conley, Edward P. Fischer, Harry Baxter, Don S. Young and Fire Chief Robert E. Smith.

Sweater Thief Gets Six Months In Jail And Last Chance

Six months in the county jail was the sentence given Monday by Judge Stanley Lawson to Donald B. Lawrence, 54, found guilty of stealing two sweaters from a Carmel store in June.

The crime, a petty theft, was charged as a felony in this case as Lawrence was an ex-convict who has spent almost half his life in prison.

Judge Lawson remarked that the six-months sentence was probably the last break Lawrence would receive. Henceforth, if found guilty of a crime, he might receive a life sentence.

Bank of Carmel Shareholders To Meet On Merger

Formal approval by the boards of directors of Crocker-Anglo National Bank, The First National Bank of Monterey, The Bank of Carmel and The First National Bank of Pacific Grove of the merger in which the three latter banking institutions would merge into and become part of Crocker-Anglo was announced this week by Paul E. Hoover, president of Crocker-Anglo National Bank, and T. A. Work, chairman of the board of the three Monterey Peninsula banks.

The proposed merger is now contingent upon approval by the respective shareholders and consent of supervisory authorities. Separate special meetings of the shareholders of all banks concerned will be held on September 22 at the various banks at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose of considering and acting on the merger plan.

In the event of the merger, Monterey area customers will continue to be served by the same men and women who have handled their banking needs in the past, as officers and staff members of the three banks will be officers and staff members of Crocker-Anglo. The two bank heads said that it is expected that directors of the three respective banks would become members of Crocker-Anglo's Monterey, Carmel and Pacific Grove advisory committees.

Letters . . .

Box 3314, Carmel

Dear Editor:

May I once again take up some valuable space in your paper—this time to champion in a mild way the Carmelites.

In last week's paper with reference to the demolition of our Carmel Theater, Patricia Hall writes, "The fact is that Carmel did not support the Carmel Theater. Many times I have been there when there were not enough paid admissions to have paid for the lights, even to see South Pacific."

Well now, I went to South Pacific, and though I was outside the theater half an hour before the booking opened a queue had formed. Inside the house was full. After South Pacific had been running for over a week I went again and there were crowds of people in the theater. Now we should not forget one thing, and that is that the Carmel Theater had quite a habit of keeping their shows on far too long. Three weeks, four weeks would go by and the same film would be running. I am not talking only about South Pacific, it may have been kept on so long since the theater had to come down; but many other movies were also held over for several weeks. This applies also to the showing of movies in the Golden Bough Theater. Many week ends went by, and because we had seen films in both movie houses twice already, we were at a loss to find entertainment of this sort in Carmel. We are not a large population and a place like Carmel does need a new show at least once a week. As I said in my last letter, we are full of regrets that the Carmel Theater is being pulled down, disregarding the shortcoming I mentioned above, films of great superiority have been shown all the time and, we find ourselves at a great loss, being left with one movie house in Carmel.

Sincerely yours,
—CATHERINE EASTWOOD

IT'S THE WEATHER

The garden snail he lives a quiet life,
No high excitement and no bitter strife.
How good it were when all excitements fail to be a snail!
The fish avoids the broiling summer sun,
And in the cooling water takes his fun.
On these hot summer days what better wish than be a fish?
The bear avoids the snowy winter storm
In hibernating comfort, safe and warm.
How wonderful the winter cold to spare and be a bear!
So here I sit in quiet, like a snail;
When summer comes my Northern home I hail;
The Southland winter days I always share,
And grumble always like a fretful bear.

GET SALK SHOTS, URGES ROYAL

"Thousands of persons in Monterey County are inviting disaster," warned Tony Royal, chairman of the Monterey County Chapter of The National Foundation, "if they continue to neglect vaccination against polio."

Mr. Royal referred to the situation in Des Moines, Iowa, where, he said a polio epidemic is now raging in full force. "Here's a city," he added, "where large numbers of people never got their Salk shots because they thought it was too much trouble."

Mr. Royal urges all those in Monterey County who have not had any Salk shots to get started at once, and those who have had only one or two shots to complete the series of three as soon as possible.

PERENNIAL

I clipped this bud of sentiment away because it grew
so shaded by the thriving yesterday that blossoms you.

—HELEN FAULKNER

WATERFALL IN THE WOODS

In the green light, green gloom, green space,
We came upon a woodland place
Low-garlanded with moss and ferns,
Wherein the mountain-water learns
The music of the secret nooks,
The hush within the voice of brooks
Where listening is a happiness
To soothe the mind, and calm and bless.
And just beyond the giant rocks
Hurled by some violent force in blocks,
The water with a deeper flow
Moved cautiously and quiet and slow,
For change and torrent lay in wait
To meet it with tumultuous fate,
And from the avenues of peace
To bring awakening and release.
Then plunging from the rocky height
With new velocity and might
The waterfall, newborn and free
Came tumbling downward gloriously,
Crashing the silence with its voice
And making all the air rejoice
With mighty undertones, and throngs
Of little crystal leaping songs
And full harmonious vibrant chords
Into the quivering silence poured;
And looking back from farther down
The falling water seemed to crown
The silent woods and all in them
With one clear-flashing diadem
Forever transient yet strong,
A singing jewel, a shining song!

—DORA HAGEMEYER.

VOLCANO IRAZU
(Costa Rica)

No fronded leaf,
No brilliant flower,
Nor flash of bird
Refutes the grim austerity
Of Irazu.
The mountain's crest
Has vanished, burnt
To bitter ash.
Fragments of mist,
Like frozen breath,
Blow from the crater's
Rusty throat toward
Sky of indigo,
Where curves a froth of cloud
Of internal fires.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

Ruth Galvin Thornburg, Librarian

Charlotte, North Carolina, is an industrial city in the South which has the distinction of having Harry Golden as editor of one of its newspapers, The Carolina Israelite. And he has the distinction of having his first book a best seller. That was Only In America. Now he has written For Two Cents Plain, and this may do the same thing the other one did, be a best seller. When Harry Golden was a little boy, he could buy a glass of plain soda water for two cents. To have flavoring added cost another penny. Money was scarce, so the usual thing was to say "Give me for two cents plain." This is a collection of essays and editorials on every conceivable subject. Well worth reading.

Cliff Arquette has been going well in show business for a great many years, and for the past three years he has been a hit in television. His letters from mama really need his ability as a comedian to give the full flavor of homespun comedy but even without the author, you can enjoy Charley Weaver's Letters from Mama in book form.

In case you write, you will be interested in Theodore Berstein's book Watch Your Language, a Lively, Informal Guide to Better Writing. Mr. Berstein has been on the staff of the New York Times for many years and for the past seven of those years he has been preparing bulletins on better English for the rest of the staff. This is practical material with a punch, and a smile.

They say that with a knowledge of judo a small person can overcome a great bully with ease. Such a remark always makes this librarian feel very brittle. But if you are of more sturdy stuff, borrow our new book entitled Judo, Basic Principles, by Eric Dominy. Perhaps after reading this and studying its many pictures, you can begin to throw your enemies around with ease. If you have enemies.

The Meddlesome Friar and the Wayward Pope is the story of the conflict between Savonarola and Alexander VI. It was written by Count Michael de la Bedoyere.

The wolverine has long been feared and hated by residents of the north countries. Peter Krott is an Austrian naturalist who went to Finland to study the wolverine, and as a result of five years of study he learned that this small ferocious animal may be tamed and become a house pet with a love for his captors and for life in captivity. Mr. Krott nicknamed the wolverine "tupu" and it is as tupu that the reader of the book learns to think of these animals. The title of the book is Demon of the North, and it is illustrated with many photographs.

Those of us with gardens should live in Mount Idy where Charlie Weaver's parents live. Mama says, "Your father just invented a wonderful new plant food. It's so powerful the plants come into the house for it. He put some on a little plant the other day and in less than five minutes we had to call the fire department to come out and get him down out of the top branches."

Frederick Rider Has Still Another Outstanding Achievement To His Credit In Endgame At Circle Theatre

By Virginia Shaw

One of the most profound, perplexing creative personalities of these perplexing times is again in our midst: Samuel Beckett, whose latest play, Endgame, is masterfully presented by Richard Bailey at the Golden Bough Circle Theatre.

It is no accident that the current production is the most provocative experiment on the local stage since last year's Waiting for Godot, which introduced the Beckett-cum-Bailey combination to Peninsula audiences with signal success.

Endgame, even more than Godot, is a thorny proposition from any point of view—that of actor, director, critic or viewer. In it, through striking if sometimes baffling verbal and visual images, Beckett presents an apocalyptic vision of the way the world ends, in a wasteland which is the end product of man's inhumanity to man and to his own nature, a world of egotism and selfishness and apathy. Nor is there here any real possibility of redemption, as there is in Godot: the picture is bleak, chilling, godless, virtually hopeless.

The four characters who play out Endgame are the crippled, self-imprisoned survivors of an apparently lifeless and devastated land, inhabiting a tomb-like basement among the ruins. There is Hamm, blind and tyrannical, demanding and despairing, yet pathetic; Clov, his broken, embittered servant; and Nagg and Nell, the senile, truncated remains of his progenitors, poor human refuse consigned to two trash cans. Like the characters in Godot, these do not really know what has happened, or what it means: ". . . something is running its course." And meantime, there are senseless daily rituals to be performed, questions to be asked but not answered, enigmas posed but not resolved. At the end, one move is still perhaps possible; and one is left to his own conclusions whether it is, or is not, made.

Beckett, whose literary coevals include Joyce and Kafka, Sartre and Camus, is no arbitrary stylist or fashionable "beat": he reached full stature as an artist and thinker when the Angry Young Men were still flinging porridge at their nannies. His use of distortion, exaggeration and symbolism is the legitimate artistic expression of a powerful, personal concern with the social, psychological and intellectual paradoxes of our time, and while the application of these devices may be somewhat puzzling, their impact is undeniable. Endgame is disturbing, moving and provocative; exasperating, but also stimulating.

Richard Bailey has done a magnificent job with the production of Endgame: projecting Beckett's world of monstrous irrelevancies where there is not an irrelevant word or gesture, Mr. Bailey employs techniques both pantomimic and poetic as well as theatric, and does it with force and precision. Apart from his achievement as director, Mr. Bailey was called upon at the last moment to undertake the key role of Hamm, originally to be played by John Gunnels, and his performance of this rather frightening, complex personage is remarkable.

Each individual member of the cast is, in fact, excellent, and together they create a finely balanced production. The grimly ironic Clov is played by John Clemons with a grace and sensitivity which make even his tormented movements something of beauty, and which subtly convey the play's only hint of pity and compassion. The restless, grotesque and querulous Nagg is wonderfully acted by Ron Joy, and Maria Hallstead gives an extremely moving performance as Nell, resigned and wistful in the peculiar hell in which she and Nagg are confined. Miss Hallstead, who also designed the costumes for the play, substitutes in her role for Margaret Gill.

The stagecraft employed in Endgame leaves little to be desired, and the production is effectively and appropriately mounted; the lighting effects are particularly noteworthy. Joe Dagleish is stage manager, with Ronnie Cummings as production assistant.

Frederick Rider, managing director of the Circle, has still another outstanding achievement to his credit. Endgame plays Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 8:30 o'clock. It is an important, unforgettable play; it should be seen.

Backyard Swimming Pool—California

a glass of beer is many things

Californians pioneered the backyard swimming pool. Now more popular than ever, the home pool blends right in with California's relaxed way of life. And so does a good glass of beer. It's always the light, bright beverage.

And in this state beer means more than refreshment. It means a better, growing economy. In 1958, for example, the Brewing Industry purchased almost 53,000 tons of California-grown barley—just one more reason why beer means better living for Californians.

Film On Orient At Woman's Club

Members of the Carmel Woman's Club will see the film, A Tour of the Orient, on August 24 at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Bess M. Pangburn of Carmel and Mrs. Genevieve H. Lichtig of Oakland will present the motion picture and narration. She operated between Yokosuka and Kobe, Japan, supporting the fleet's destroyers with repairs and maintenance. The Dixie also visited Hong Kong.

Martins See New York Shows

Mr. and Mrs. Royden Martin and their daughter Shelly, 12, are back in Carmel for the rest of the summer after a trip to Florida and New York.

They flew to Florida, visited Mrs. Martin's daughter, Mrs. Dwight Doerr, her husband and nine-months-old son Mike, then with the Doerrs drove to New York to see shows "art and otherwise," says Mr. Martin, artist and producer. Ten days of this activity with much enjoyment and much worn shoe leather, and the Martins came home by jet.

Among the "otherwise" shows they saw were Jerome Kern's Leave It To Jane in the Sheridan Square Theater, Once Upon A Mattress at the Phoenix, La Plume de Ma Tante, Gypsy, Sweet Bird of Youth and Redhead with Gwen Verdon also Billie Barnes Revue.

They looked up Dossie Hollingsworth who played in the Martins' Studio Theater in Carmel last summer. She was appearing in Gentlemen Prefer Blondes in Meadowbrook, New Jersey, in a restaurant which provides a full musical with dinner each evening. Mr. Martin was impressed with the demountable stage which was placed in the middle of the restaurant for the performance, removed later for dancing. It had two levels and four ramp entrances.

William A. Strom of Salinas was also seen by the Martins. He is artistic coordinator for Billy Rose's new National Theater in New York. They had a Sunday brunch with Tiger Hanes as the informal entertainer.

Referring to the art shows he saw, Royden Martin said he was impressed by the fact that not too much completely non-representational painting was exhibited. "There was a predominance of impressionistic work," he says. At the Museum of Modern Art he particularly admired a Modigliani original which, in reproduction, had been one of his favorite paintings. He was also asked to submit some of his own work to Portraits, Incorporated, and covered the 57th Street galleries.

After Labor Day, the Martins will return to their Stockton home for the winter.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

How the understanding of God as divine Mind brings health and harmony will be brought out Sunday at Christian Science services.

John's account of the healing by Christ Jesus of the impotent man at the pool of Bethesda (Ch. 5) is presented in the Bible readings. The Lesson-Sermon is entitled "Mind."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read the following (339:25-28): "The basis of all health, sinlessness, and immortality is the great fact that God is the only Mind; and this Mind must be not merely believed, but it must be understood."

The Golden Text is from Psalms (147:5): "Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite."

Ralph Seymour Revisits

Friendships were renewed and experiences relived during the recent visit to Carmel of Ralph Seymour, Chicago artist, who in the 20's built the house on Carmel Point now occupied by the McGinnis family.

While here, Mr. Seymour was the guest of Henry F. Dickinson with whom his friendship extends to the days before the Dickinson family moved to Carmel. He visited Mrs. Paul Flanders, also a former friend, and with Abel Warshawsky relived art student days in Paris.

Before returning to Chicago to paint murals for the Lincoln Room of the Lasalle Hotel, Mr. Seymour visited the beatnik areas of San Francisco and fascinated, sketched many of the personalities he saw. He was taken on the beatnik tour by Edith Dickinson of Sausalito, Mr. Dickinson's daughter.

Nancy Wooliever, Lead in Pharaoh, Follows Tradition

young boys who are in the play, having learned their parts, are now "resting" by doing manual labor on the sets. And through it all run the firm but cheerful admonitions of the young assistant director, Robin Roberts. Ora Fallis comes up from her studio every little while to get new measurements and try on costumes. Roland Scheffler has checked the elaborate lighting system, to make sure all is in order, Mausita Jennings has the music well in hand. Joyce Bishop is finishing the poster, which promises to be unusually effective.

It is a joy to watch the sure development of the production in these lovely summer days in our forest in the heart of Carmel. It is interesting, too, to note the family relationships and connections with the past history of the Forest Theater.

For instance, Nancy Wooliever, who has the leading woman's role in Pharaoh, is the daughter of the lovely Luraine Plank, who gave such a fine portrayal of the First Wife in the last production of The Yellow Jacket. And Eugene Watson, for many years a big light in local theater work, married Luraine's mother, so we have three generations in this family. Watson played Major Petkoff in Arms and the Man in 1926, Friar Laurence in Romeo and Juliet and Tristan l'Hermite in If I Were King in 1927, Quince in A Midsummer-Night's Dream in 1931, Tigellinus in Salome in 1932, Antonio in The Merchant of Venice in 1933, and the Lawyer in The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife in 1934. Quite a collection of fine roles, finally played in the Forest Theater.

Nikita Harrison, who plays Ruby Simpson in the Prologue to Pharaoh, is the daughter of John Harrison, who plays Sir William Vandal, and John is the grandson of the author of an early Forest Theater play. And John, as a small boy, was in the second Alice in Wonderland. This 1918 production was directed by Kit Cooke, the original Alice of this version in 1912. Alice in Wonderland, incidentally, has had three full productions and one fragment.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, however, tops them all with four full productions (1915-1931-1948-1957). Twelfth Night comes close, with two full productions and two streamlined (1911-1940-1942-1956). Inchling, by our own Rem, had three productions (1922-1928-1936).

To go back a little, Nancy Lofton was a charming Hermia in the 1948 "Dream," and her daughter of the same name was Moth in this production and played Helena in the last production of A Midsummer-Night's Dream, two years ago.

Karen Von Meier was the small Starbird in the 1948 "Dream" and nine years later played Hermia in the same play, not to mention a delightful Maria in Twelfth Night.

Going back still further, Professor Francis E. Lloyd played the Curate in Macaire, and Cortez in Montezuma, in 1914; and his son, Frank Lloyd, acted in Hamlet in 1926, and Frank's daughter Jennefer was in the Festival of 1948. Again three generations in the Forest Theater.

My own little daughter was a Fairy Child in The Land of Heart's Desire at the age of five, in Alice in Wonderland at six, played Moth in A Midsummer-Night's Dream when she was nine, and when she was grown up played leads in Carmel Nights, Julius Caesar, and Love-Liars.

Nor can I ever forget the O'Neils in the first production of Hamlet. Not several generations through the years, but one whole family in one play! David O'Neil was a fine Claudius, the usurping king of Denmark; his two sons, Horton and George, were respectively Marcellus and Fortinbras; Barbara O'Neil, then a very young girl and now a well-known actress, was a lady of the court; and Mrs. O'Neil brought sandwiches and coffee to sustain us during the final rehearsals!

I am personally very grateful to the theater enthusiasts of Carmel for this season's program for the open-air stage. When I started the Forest Theater, in 1910, it was primarily for the production of plays by local authors, along with Shakespeare and other good plays suited to the open air. David, the inaugural production, was written by a Californian novelist, historian and critic. The next year we did Twelfth Night. In 1912 came the first performance of a work by an actual resident of Carmel—The Toad, by Bertha Newberry, followed by Alice in Wonderland, dramatized by Perry Newberry and Arthur Vachel, both Carmel residents and tireless workers in the Forest Theater.

In 1913 we staged Runnymede, by William Greer Harrison, followed by Aladdin and the Lamp, by Elizabeth Field Christy and Perry Newberry. Then came Fire, the wonderful poetic drama by Mary Austin. It is roughly the Prometheus legend transformed into primitive California legend—the bringing of fire from Heaven for man's use on earth. The cast of Fire was almost wholly made up of poets, musicians, ministers, college professors, novelists and other writers. I had the honor of playing the principal part in this great play—something I still remember with a thrill. Curiously enough, when Mrs. Austin gave a talk before the Poetry Society of New York three years later, she said her play had been performed by a cast of Indians—thus getting back, she implied, to the roots of a lost civilization. Anyway, it sounded good — and her audience had no way of checking on her statement. That same summer there were five other plays (more or less experimental) by resident authors.

In 1914 came Macaire, The Arrow Maker, Montezuma — all by local writers, and three other productions, including the premiere of Sidney Howard's first play.

In 1915 Perry Newberry staged his pageant-drama Junipero Serra. Then came A Midsummer-Night's Dream, four short plays by Carmelites, and The Man from Home by our own Harry Leon Wilson (with Booth Tarkington).

In 1916 came Yolanda of Cyprus, then The Piper, then Tusitala (a grouping of dramatizations of stories by Robert Louis Stevenson), then Charlie's Aunt (1) and finally three short plays by Carmel children.

So in the first seven years of the Forest Theater, out of 44 plays produced, 30 were wholly or partly by Carmel writers, six were Shakespeare, with eight others—thus carrying out emphatically the purpose for which the Forest Theater was founded.

As time went on, productions became more elaborate, and the trend veered sharply to standard drama. The proportion of Carmel authors has been small compared to the first seven years: 25 out of 95 in 43 years.

So this season is very gratifying to me. The superb production of Medea, by our own world-famous poet, was followed by a lovely and fantastically charming Ondine (a western premiere, though of course not of local authorship), and now, short of some unforeseen accident, my own Pharaoh, due to open on Thursday, August 27.

And speaking of accidents, it is a fact that in the whole 50 years' existence of the Forest Theater, no player has ever died or become so ill near to the date of a performance that he could not play his part. No show has even been abandoned because of death or illness. The one case that might have clouded this record was when Leonard Cosky, playing Octavius in the Julius Caesar of 1930, was in an auto wreck on his way to the theater for the second night's performance. (The first night was successfully over.) We put George Ball, who was playing Marullus (only in the opening scene) into forced rehearsal in the basement while the play was going on above. George had an hour and a half to get up in the part of Octavius (fortunately a short one and only in the last act). It was not exactly as Shakespeare wrote it, but I doubt if anyone in the audience knew the difference.

DEEN ROWE ON WAY TO SWITZERLAND

Deen Rowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rowe, left here by plane on Sunday then flew from San Francisco Airport to New York by jet. Yesterday he crossed the Atlantic by air to Lisbon. He plans a four or five-day stay in Portugal and to spend the same length of time in Madrid before continuing to Zurich, Switzerland.

In Zurich, Deen will enter the training program of the 100-year-old Bally shoe manufacturing company, the first American boy to be accepted. After six weeks in the Bally shoe store in Zurich, Deen will go to the firm's manufacturing plant for another six weeks' training. Here he will work from 7:30 o'clock in the morning until 6:00 o'clock in the evening but "ski week ends."

When the plant period ends Deen will decide whether to continue his Bally training in the company's stores in London and Paris or come home to enter Menlo Junior College. He graduated from Carmel High School in June. His father, James Rowe, is proprietor of the Village Shoe Tree in Carmel.

Abstractism Not Art Says Chinese Painter S. C. Yuan

the globe, including Moscow.

At Nanking Yuan settled down to work. A man of great vitality and explosive temperament, he is at the opposite pole from the traditional picture of the reserved, inscrutable Far Easterner. When he talks, which is almost invariably with great conviction, his features tend to become completely mobile and expressive.

The 20 year period before World War II was one of the richest in Chinese art history. All the moderns, particularly the French, were imported into China together with their styles, and kept the art students of Nanking and Shanghai in a continual ferment.

Just about the time that Si-Chen Yuan began to integrate his ideas into canvas, the war came along. Together with almost all of his generation, he found himself engulfed. He was by turns a Political Commissar in China's Army; later a Liaison Interpreter with the U.S. Air Force.

In 1949, with the Communist Armies taking control of the country, Yuan found himself in the United States on a trip, and decided not to return. In 1953 he was persuaded to teach Mandarin Chinese at the Army Language School and did so for four years. By 1957, however, the will to paint could no longer be denied, and Yuan returned to his first love.

This latter is a point that he stresses again and again. If someone is truly interested in Art, it will develop naturally, he says. Children may play at art, but this does not necessarily mean that they are either potential artists or talented. The desire to paint is inborn, he insists, and will out despite all disadvantages.

Chinese Art has become quite popular in the U.S. during the last decade, Yuan points out because its chief principles are Naturalism and Spiritualism. In traditional Chinese Art you were supposed to escape reality and create your own dreamland. The higher this mystical quality, the closer was your approach to heaven. This Si-chen Yuan points out with great good humor, was an approach ideally suited to this country's mood of the last 10 years.

Collectors of Chinese Art here have succeeded in giving students a distorted picture of the work done in China, he reminds, because their collections have represented only their own taste, and generally been most unrepresentative. He points out in passing that the Communists, for the first time in China's history, have been attempting to assemble typical collections of painting for public exhibits.

Three extensive exhibits of Yuan's work were held during the World War II period in China, and in this country he has been shown at special shows in Cambridge, Massachuetts, as well as the Carmel Art Association and a variety of galleries throughout the country.

A man of considerable thoughtfulness, Yuan has pondered developments in his fields. He says, "With abstract art in the ascendancy around the world, there is a temptation to ride with the current or to strive for individuality merely by going to extremes."

He also claims that any art, if produced in a dishonest way, will never last long, whereas honest art (used in the sense of integrity) has a permanent value. Because art is a universal language, it must have something to communicate to people, or it will not be accepted by the public, and in the end will fail.

Yuan insists that while experimentation is always interesting, and generally useful, it must retain roots in its background. Never mind the sputniks or beatniks, he laughs with great animation, for they will not change the human being's nature. There is no excuse for doing things in ridiculous ways, merely under the name of creation. We may redesign the church building, he points out, but the Bible will still be the same one.

Among local painters, William Ritschel and Armin Hansen are his idols; and abroad Frank Brangwan of England and Bastian of Belgium supply inspiration for Yuan's creative painting.

The great Kwan Tung, famed Chinese landscape painter, has had a powerful influence on his style, he admits, as has Ma Yuan, perhaps the best known Far Eastern master in U.S. museums. Curiously enough, so has Shih Tao—perhaps the top-ranking Chinese painter of the contemporary period—whose style is very abstract. The master's touch is the master's touch, Yuan says simply and expressively when questioned about his admiration of the latter, despite the technique employed.

Yuan himself feels that he has made great strides in the past few years, and the mushrooming demand for his work seems to support this view. It was only a few years ago that he released himself from his inhibitions regarding the use of color. Traditional Chinese training emphasized line control, form, and the value of dark and light. It was only recently, Yuan admits, that he suddenly understood that a painting was literally a symphony of color.

Emphasis on mysticism was also so strong among Chinese art circles formerly that the coarse paper—which absorbs color and hazes it—became almost an exclusive hallmark of Chinese work. Since Yuan has begun to master the use of other materials, and sharper colored forms, he feels that his work has taken on new depth.

If the opinion of visiting art critics, and the fascinated attraction of collectors are any criterion, his feeling is apt to be correct.

Well aware of what everybody confidently expected of them, the city council cut $8,000 out of the budget needed to lower the tax rate a half cent, Monday night. They meet again tomorrow at 5:00 o'clock officially to adopt the $414,831 budget and set the tax rate at 96 cents. If you are concerned over aching hearts of councilmen, each forced to sacrifice pet expansions and equipment purchases in his department to save you a half cent per $100 valuation on your tax bill, be reassured. There were some shiftings in the capital outlay and operation cost items, but none that would sadden any member of the official family.

Then how did they eliminate over $8,000 from the budget? They took it out of the $15,000 item for unspecified land purchase. Another cause for not rejoicing: this budget represents more outgo than expected income. It was bolstered by $26,000 surplus, money budgeted last year but not spent. So the council had better not spend $26,000 in this budget if they don't want to be looking for $26,000 for the next one.

Before the setting-the-tax-rate-meeting tomorrow at 5:00 o'clock, the council meets with the art commission, 4:00 o'clock to find out "more specifically what the arts commission has in mind for a Carmel arts festival."

The arts commission has already set forth specifically what it has in mind for a Carmel Arts Festival in a written report to the city council. Though they have been careful not to say so, it's possible the councilmen are as lacking in warmth for the proposed arts festival as the rest of the community.

It looks as if Councilmen Allen Knight and James Buffington do not intend to run for re-election when their terms expire in March. Both lined up with Mayor John Chitwood, at Monday night's budget session, in promoting parking meters for Carmel.

School board meeting tonight, 7:00 o'clock, high school library. Routine business agenda.

The executive board of the Carmel Citizens Committee will meet Monday night to pool their conclusions on the revised central district zoning plan for the city.

Admiral C. W. Fisher asked the planning commission yesterday if they wished to hear the citizens committee recommendations before he presented them to the city council. The planners said they would and asked him to present a written report to the planning commission at its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon, 4:00 o'clock.

Executive board of the Carmel Citizens Committee who have been studying the planners revised central district zoning plan are: Mrs. Greene Chapman, Frank B. Dixon, Col. W. W. Yale and Admiral Fisher. —W. C.
